REMINISCENCES OF JIM FELL
THE MODEST CHAMPION OF ALL

Dan Connors, the writer of this reminiscence on Jim Fell, saw Paddy Ryan go down before the onslaughts of John L. Sullivan at Mississippi City; saw Corbett win from Sullivan at New Orleans; Fitz from Corbett at Carson; Jeffries from Corbett at Coney Island and the Johnson-Jeffries go at Reno, thus seeing every world's champion made from Sullivan to Johnson, missing only the Burns-Johnson fight in Australia. In all except the Reno affair he was official reporter for the New York World. He knows whereof he speaks from personal experience.

In the winter of 1884 a husky young fellow walked to the front of Jack Dempsey's athletic hall stage on East Thirtieth street, New York, and introduced himself as Jim Fell, "open to meet any mon' breethin', black or white, bar none." At the time Fell was a fugitive from justice. He was wanted by the police of Omaha on a charge of prize fighting with one Jack Hanley on the outskirts of the city. Henley went to prison for two years at Lincoln, Neb. Fell managed to escape. It was one of the longest ring contests on record, lasting 93 rounds, London rules, bare knuckles. The big daily papers used columns to print the battle in detail, so Fell needed little further introduction.

Jack Cooper, champion of South Africa, was Fell's first victim on Dempsey's stage. A right hook to the jaw dropped Cooper in the fourth round. From then on, Jim was kept busy at frequent intervals dropping the "trial horses" and "hopes" from Brooklyn, Harlem and Jersey. The worst he got was a draw from a middleweight colored champion by the name of Johnny Banks.

One day along comes big Jack McDevitt, the "holy terror of Boston"—six foot six—with a pedigree. Fell was sized up by the fans for a trimming.

"How are you going to reach him, Jim?" I asked. "Looks like I'll 'im in the bread basket with a left; if 'e don't go down, I'll 'ook 'im in the jaw; if 'e standin' then I'll 'ave to walk behind the bloomer to see if 'e's propped up."

Bing goes the bell, the seconds are climbing from the ring, down goes Mack, six-six to the mat, almost before the ending of the gong sound. Mack was out fully ten minutes. When he came to, his first words were: "Mary, is breakfast ready?" Mack thought he just woke from a sound night's sleep.

Arthur Chambers of Philadelphia, brought in his protégé, Denny Butler, whom he backed for $1,500 to fight Fell, London rules, skin-tight gloves, finish. The men met at a scheduled spot in Harlem, before a selected audience of about 100, mostly well known New York business men. Among the professional spectators were Tony Pastor, Nat Goodwin, Henry Dixie, Thatcher and Primrose.

Second round—Fell, with the strength of a demon, rushes Dempsey, breaks his guard, gets in close; then follows a real fight—brute force against science. Dempsey is plainly weakening against the terrible onslaught of Fell who, close in, hammers his ribs like a cooper around a barrel. Pandemonium reigns in the audience—is the great and undefeated Nonpareil to take his first defeat from Fell?

"Take him out," yell Dempsey's friends. Every man is on his feet. "Take him out, take him out," Dempsey's ribs bear signs of the terrible short arm swings; he sinks to his knees, just as Madden and Charley Mitchell rush between the men and save Jack from sure defeat. Dempsey's weight was 152 pounds; Fell weighed 180 pounds.

Fell was matched to fight big Joe Lannan, a giant with a good record, of the John L. Sullivan troupe. The men met before a crowd of 10,000 spectators. Fell won in four rounds. The bill sent in by Billy Oliver for seats and drinks for this fight covered a foetus. Among the long string of items was Bass' ale with a score of "ditto" beneath the English beverage. "Looks ind. This bill is a blowed shake down—'Ere 'e 'as me charged with them 'do-drinks—what kind of a drink is a do-do-do—all the ways down, looks."

His next opponent was the dangerous blacksmith at Coney Island. Fell won in six rounds. Shortly after this fight, Jim left New York. That was in 1885. My next meeting with Fell was by chance at the Johnson-Jeffries go at Reno. He was fighting the champion of them all—John Barleycorn.

PETER FABB, Prop.

At Amalgamated Pioche No. 1 shaft during the past week arrangements for handling the water which, it is expected, may soon be encountered on the fourteenth level, have been completed. The massive bulkhead has been completed, the two pumps overhauled and connected up, according to the Pioche Record.

While installing the concrete of this bulkhead, work at the face of the crosscut was discontinued for several shifts in order to permit the cement to set hard before concussion from blasting should come against it. The Raymond and Ely vein may be cut at any time now, and with it may come the water, though it is not improbable that only by drifting along the vein will the watercourse be sufficiently opened to bring the flow into the fourteenth level.

Ore from the twelfth level under the slope above the Black ledge winze is now being mined. A few men only are at work on this ore, because there is so limited a space at the collar of the shaft where sorting may be done. To do away with this limitation, bins and sorting arrangements have been designed and are being built. Only the first-class shipping ore will be sorted out—the balance, except waste, will be piled at a point half way between shaft No. 1 and the Greenwood shaft, a location from which it can be easily picked up again for future milling.

The ore is the typical black zinc sulphide, which is responsible for the name "Black Ledge ore." It carries small seams and kidneys of galena. There are gold and silver values in both minerals.

H. W. Rand, the Portland mining man, arrived in the city last Sunday, accompanied by S. B. Vincent, state mine inspector of Oregon, the latter having come to make an inspection of the Virginia-Louise, California-Pioche and Oregon-Pioche. This was Mr. Vincent's first trip to the district, and he went away exceedingly well pleased with what he saw. He declared that he had heard a great deal about the camp and had been anxious to visit here for some time. Mr. Vincent, through the courtesy of Superintendent Quirk of the Prince Con., had the opportunity to go down into the Prince mine, and was amazed at the enormity of the ore bodies exposed there.

The Yuba Leasing company shipped a car of ore this week from its Raymond and Ely No. 3 lease. The company is working three shifts.

It is the purest distilled, and not a grain of adulteration in a barrel of it. We confidently recommend it both to the sick and the convalescent as an unfailing tonic to uphold the system that is run down.
